FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: November 13, 2019

It happens to most of us. We wake up one day and suddenly we're what Dr. Suess calls "obsolete children." The world around us has changed and we're confronted with difficult decisions in our senior years about our healthcare, housing and more.

~~Council~~ "We want to provide a road map for seniors," said Vicky Wetz, coordinator for ~~Coalition~~ on Aging (COA).

Wetz has developed "A Day of Education," a lunch-and-learn session, scheduled Saturday, November 16, from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., at the Valley County Senior Center, 328 Fourth Street South in Glasgow.

"We have a raft of experts to provide insights on various topics and to answer specific questions about local concerns that any senior might have," Wetz said.

Subject matter experts include Wes Thompson, Valley View Home Administrator, who will share the implications of Montana's and of Valley County's aging demographics. Emily Young, Social Services coordinator at Valley View Home, will be on hand for a Q-and-A session to answer general and specific questions about Valley View Home services and care.

Mary Hughes, Center Office Manager at Eastern Montana Mental Health, will cover services provided by the center and the work of the new Valley Care Coalition.

Glasgow Mayor Becky Erickson, will address housing issues, including the results of a housing survey.

Bronwin Hanshew, Bell Mortuary Funeral Director, will offer advice on pre-arrangement and pinpoint significant financial planning issues.

Wetz will provide an overview of services she manages through the ~~Coalition~~ ^{Council} for Aging and at the Senior Center. Other topics include the 2020 U.S. Census, scams and frauds, homecare services and legal services.

The session and lunch are free and open to the public.
